1. To begin, open your image from the chapter's Files folder using the "Photoshop Chapter 2" file from the CD. If you have not done so already, click the Chapter 2 button in the upper-left corner of the Photoshop CS6 window (Figure 2.1). In the Photoshop CS6 window, notice that your image is on the left side of the window and is the last image on the left side of the Layers palette. 2. Click the Multiply (M) button at the bottom of the Layers palette to open the Multiply dialog box. The Multiply dialog box opens so that you can play with the settings for this adjustment, as shown in Figure 2.2. Figure 2.1: Click the Chapter 2 icon in the upper-left corner of the Photoshop window to view the image in the chapter. 3. Click the Amount slider to the right of the button. The dialog box changes as shown in Figure 2.2. In this example, I've increased the values to +250 and +150 for the left and right layers. 4. Check the Relative Values check box to keep the two Adjustment Layers from becoming incorrectly combined with each other. You'll see the result of the adjustment in the next example. 5. Click OK to make the adjustment and accept the default name for the adjustment layer (it will be named Adjustment Layer 1). The Adjustment Layer icon will now appear as a small arrow button near the top of the Layers palette. Figure 2.2: The Multiply dialog box Sometimes you might wish to apply more than one adjustment to your image. For example, you might apply the Levels adjustment to create black-and-white in your image and the Curves adjustment to correct the contrast and make the highlights brighter. To do this, create an adjustment layer for each of the adjustments and apply each adjustment as needed. 6. Create another adjustment layer. Click the New Adjustment Layer icon (it looks like a plus sign with a line through it, shown in the margin) at the bottom of the Layers palette. Then click the button above the layer name to open the New Adjustment Layer dialog box (Figure 2.3). You see the dialog box for the Curves adjustment

Q: How can I get the userinfo of a user by User.current.is_authenticated? With the current implementation I can get the user's info via User.current (...). I can also get the user's info via the documentation. But is it possible to get it via User.current.is_authenticated? A: Yes, you can: Authorization.current_user.email If you want a flash message: render json: { error: Authorization.current_user.email, success: "Hello, #{Authorization.current_user.email}" }, status: 422 I hope it helps. Q: How can I choose the tab for a UIAlertController from a keyboard shortcut? I have a UIAlertController as the only view controller of my app and, by default, I have no tabs in a particular section. Is there a way to choose which tab to display by default? I'd like to assign a keyboard shortcut to toggle between tabs. I have seen the question, iOS - tabbed UIAlertController. However, I would like to know a general purpose method that I can apply to all alert controllers (except perhaps alert controllers that are presented modally). A: Try assigning a global shortcut to the UITabBarController instance (if it's the one that's displaying the current UIAlertController view) in the Info.plist file. Then assign that shortcut to the alert controller view controller. In your Info.plist, under Application Keys section, add the following key: UIApplicationShortcutItems Type URL URL default Title Custom shortcut Run com.domain.domain

913 A.2d 500, 505 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2006). The Board's findings are considered fact and will not be disturbed unless they are unsupported by substantial evidence. Id. Substantial evidence is defined as such relevant evidence as a reasonable person might accept as adequate to support a conclusion. Id. The Board's findings of fact are binding upon this Court where the evidence, record and law support those findings. Davis v. Unemployment Compensation Board of Review, 898 A.2d 988 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2006). To establish reasonable notice of the employer's fixed and substantial change in the terms and conditions of employment, the claimant must prove both: (1) a change in the employment; and (2) the change was substantial. Stauffer v. Unemployment Compensation Board of Review, 49 A.3d 531, 534 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2012). The claimant has the burden of proving both prongs of the test and must satisfy all of its elements. Id. The claimant must demonstrate that his employer knew or reasonably should have known that the employer changed the terms and conditions of employment. Id. A unilateral change in the employment conditions that occurred after the employee's acceptance is not sufficient to provide reasonable notice. Bensalem Township v. Unemployment Compensation Board of Review, 59 A.3d 661, 669 (Pa. Cmwlth. 2013). However, the employer's awareness that the 4 terms and conditions of employment have changed is a subjective standard that is dependent upon the surrounding circumstances. Stauffer, 49 A.3d at 534. The circumstances for assessing the reasonableness of the employer's notice must be viewed from the employer's perspective. See e.g., Thompson v. Unemployment Compensation Board of Review, 505 A.2d 621, 623 (Pa. Cmwlth. 1986). Employer argues that it
